

Thesis Interest Worksheet

Department of Economics

rev. April 2019

This form is meant to encourage prospective thesis writers to start thinking about their theses sooner rather than later. If you plan to write a thesis next year, now is the time to get started. On the reverse, please provide us with either:

1. The name and signature of a professor who has agreed to be your thesis advisor next year.

OR

2. The names of three faculty with whom you have communicated, either in person or via e-mail, about possibly being your advisor.

Please return this form by Friday, May 10, 2019 to the Economics Undergraduate Office (Litt 112).

This form is not meant to box you in or punish "late starters." We will not prevent you from writing a thesis if you do not return the form. The goal is strongly impress upon you that getting started early is an excellent first step toward writing a good thesis. The research process involves many stops and starts, even for experienced researchers. Sometimes a thesis topic initially sounds good but data are not available. Sometimes a topic is great but turns out to have already been published. Sometimes a particular advisor/advisee pairing is not a good fit. If you start early, you have time to recover from any pitfalls. You also get the chance to think more deeply about your topic, get started on collecting data, and talk to more people about your research, which is a key part of the research process.

Thus, this form is strong signal and recommendation, rather than a binding requirement.

In the fall, you will have to submit an "official" thesis registration form (even if you've submitted this one), at which time you must have a thesis advisor. If you choose to change your advisor in the fall from the one who has signed this form, please be sure to inform them as this will free up an advising space for someone else.

Best of luck on your thesis adventure!
